Instructors: Dr. Mervyn Eloff, David Helm, Dr. John Woodhouse,
Dr. Philip G. Ryken, and Romell Williams, Jr.

CATALOG DESCRIPTION

This course provides a teaching practice and laboratory to provide students with tools, models, and opportunities for practicing teaching from Old Testament History. It includes viewing online content delivered by the Charles Simeon Trust and participating in discussions on the content, which are then supplemented with additional readings that focus attention on the exegetical demands of this genre, specifically concerning how to study Old Testament History for preaching and teaching.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

By the end of this course:

1. Students will have an accurate grasp of the main characteristics of Old Testament History and understand the specialized opportunities and demands of teaching from this genre.
2. Students will improve the quality of their own study and preparation for teaching by interacting with instructional material from expert practitioners and over preparation on texts from Old Testament History.
3. Students will, by presenting their own work in the context of collegial and critical small group, be better able to identify and improve in skills and strategies relevant to expounding Old Testament History.
4. Students will appreciate the value of offering and receiving constructive feedback.
5. Students will allow the taught Word itself to inform their lives in ways consistent with the reasons the Holy Spirit saw fit to include them in Scripture.

COURSE FORMAT

This course is divided into four primary components:

1. The first component is the student's viewing of the eight online videos and the completion of the relevant study questions. These eight videos include five instructional sessions and three sample expositions.
2. The second component is the small group sessions where the student will discuss the assigned study questions as well as prepare two assigned passages from Old Testament History in advance and present them for collegial feedback.
3. The third component is reading all assigned texts and writing one critical book review.
4. The fourth component and capstone project is to prepare and two sermons from assigned passages from Old Testament History using the tools, skills, and strategies taught in the course and provide supporting preparation documentation.
